The Ship

I am standing upon that foreshore.
A ship at my side spreads her white sails
to the morning breeze and starts for the blue ocean.
She is an object of beauty and strength, and I stand and watch her until at length she hangs down like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come down and mingle at the horizon. Then, someone at my side says,
“There! She’s gone!”

Gone where?
Gone from my sight, that’s all.

She is just as large in mast and spar and hull as ever she was when she left my side; just as able to bear her load of living freight to her place of destination. Her diminished size is in me, not in her.
And just at that moment when someone at my side says,
“There! She’s gone,” there are other eyes watching her coming,
and other voices ready to take up the glad shout:
“Here she comes!”

And that is dying.

When I Am Gone

When I come to the end of my journey
And I travel my last weary mile,
Just forget, if you can, that I ever frowned
And remember only the smile.

Forget unkind words I have spoken;
Remember some good I have done.
Forget that I ever had heartache
And remember I've had loads of fun.

Forget that I've stumbled and blundered
And sometimes fell by the way.
Remember I have fought some hard battles
And won, ere the close of the day.

Then forget to grieve for my going,
I would not have you sad for a day,
But in summer just gather some flowers
And remember the place where I lay.

And come in the shade of evening,
When the sun paints the sky in the west,
Stand for a few moments beside me
And remember only my best.
