WORDS OF WELCOME

POEM

The lights go out, the engines roar,
You've made it to the final tour.
You lived your life with feet held down,
A true enthusiast of the town.

From Friday practice to the race,
You loved the passion, loved the pace.
You knew the tactics, every team,
And lived the ultimate racing dream.

Now you have cleared the final bend,
A chequered flag, but not the end.
You crossed the line, your journey done,
The ultimate pole, the greatest run.

May the grandstands in the sky cheer loud,
As you look down upon the crowd.
Rest peacefully, your lights are green,
The greatest fan we've ever seen.
