Words of welcome

Poem

'HER LIGHT REMAINS'

The years she held were fewer than the world had planned,
yet each was a lantern she carried in steady hands.
She walked through storms without bowing her head,
turning rain into rivers where wildflowers spread.
Her laughter was a thread that stitched the days,
binding the frayed edges in quiet, gentle ways.
She spoke in kindness, and the air would still —
as if the earth leaned closer just to feel.
Though her chair sits empty, her voice unheard,
the rooms still hum with her unspoken word.
Love does not vanish when the body departs —
it lingers, it grows, it roots in our hearts.
So we will not measure her life by its span,
but by the warmth she left in every hand.
And when night falls, we will look to the skies —
for her light remains, in a thousand eyes.

Closing Words

Forget me not as time goes by,
for you can find me in the sky.

Forget me not for we're apart,
for you carry me within your heart.

Forget me not although I've gone,
for my memory will always live on.

Instead, remember me in every special way.

Keep me close to your heart,
we'll meet again one day.
